

CISC 3140
Product Team

Report - Week 2

Adobe XD has continued to be our best friend this week. You will find our style guide in the product team repository folder as well as updates to our wireframe. You can access the wireframe by using the same link that we have provided in our README. It has also been posted on slack.

We are having some issues pinning down final branding. We will definitely be addressing that this week as we have our final discussions on the matter.

Steve will be finishing up on our user stories so that can also be expected this week along with a final list of all ports (communities) that will be available to our users. Settling on final branding has slowed down the completion of the wireframe. We look to have a fully-fleshed-out wireframe this coming week as well.

Lastly, the product team hopes to meet with the front end to check in on their progress and see if they need anything from us in order to continue their work.

Please refer to the wireframe for newly added changes. As usual, please don't hesitate to contact anyone of us on the product team to ask questions or raise concerns.